Confidence rises to its highest level in 2020

- Consumer confidence improved for the second week in a row. The overall index rose 1.7%, with all the subindices except 'current financial conditions' gaining. With this, confidence is now at its highest level for 2020.
- 'Current financial conditions' declined 0.6%, while 'future financial conditions' increased by 2.0%.
- 'Current economic conditions' improved by 2.9%, while 'future economic conditions' rose by 2.0%.
- 'Time to buy a major household item' grew by 1.5%. While the four-week moving average of 'inflation expectations' was steady at 3.5%, weekly inflation expectation surged to an eight month high of 3.8%.

ANZ-Roy Morgan Consumer Confidence and inflation expectations

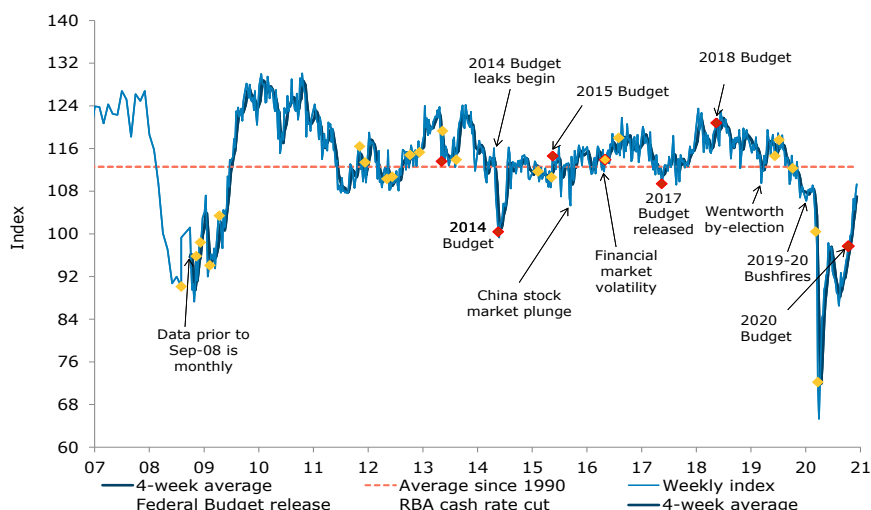

Last weekend (5-6 Dec)	Weekly change, %	Four-week average	Monthly average since 1990	Inflation expectations (four-week ma)
109.3	1.7%	107.0	112.6	3.5%

This weekly ANZ-Roy Morgan Australian Consumer Confidence Rating is based on 1,529 interviews conducted online and over the telephone on the weekend. Not seasonally adjusted. Further data history on page 6.

ANZ Head of Australian Economics, David Plank, commented:

Consumer confidence rose this week as Australian's perception of their economic and financial prospects continued to improve. The GDP release last week suggests that the economy is set for an earlier than expected return to pre-COVID levels, something that would have buoyed sentiment. The headline consumer confidence is now at its highest level in 2020. In fact, this is the first time in 18 months that confidence is higher than it was a year prior. We believe that this bodes well for year-end spending. The jump in weekly inflation expectations to an eight-month high is interesting. This aspect of the survey can be very volatile, so we will need to wait to see if the jump is confirmed by subsequent surveys. If it is, then household expectations will be at odds with official forecasts of very subdued inflation pressures.
